Kalamata did not want to admit that she was nervous. She did not know anyone in her new school. What if nobody wanted to be her friend?

"If only I could find a way to feel brave," Kalamata thought to herself.

As she was thinking, the delicious smell of the curry that Mother was cooking whooshed through the air. Immediately, Kalamata calmed down. Mother slid a plate of fried chicken and a bowl of bright yellow curry in front of her. Kalamata took a deep breath. The warmth of the dishes spread over her face.
