Bob used to man his family's drinks stall reluctantly together with his siblings. He grappled with orders and had to endure his father's endless scoldings, being the eldest. Bob faced many challenges and struggled to master the art of making drinks like his father.

His father's illness changed his perspective. He began to admire his father's meticulous movements, from skillfully pouring milk to stirring sugar. He quickly realised the essence of their craft. With the help of his siblings, Bob modernised operations through the addition of innovative flavours like Sea Salt Caramel Latte. Amidst everything, Bob was determined to keep his family's legacy alive.

Fill in each blank with a suitable word.

During the school holidays, children's free time often leads to increased use of media, including popular video games like Roblox. This extended screen time has caused numerous experts and parents to _____ their concerns.

(12)

Mr Ali a primary school teacher spoke about the worrying amount of time many children spend on games and television programmes during the holidays, often _____ six hours a day.

(13)

"We as parents need to _____ guidelines and instil impulse control in our children. Screen usage should be restricted and prioritised _____ on what is important, such as using it for online learning. This ensures children are not online excessively as it can _____ to addiction," stated Mr Ali. He stressed on the importance of parents encouraging a range of activities which _____ swimming, football and outdoor walks.

(15)

(17)

Sharing his personal _____, Mr Nasser, a parent to a 12-year-old, said,

(18)

"My son becomes incredibly engrossed when he plays games. He stays up late playing multiplayer games, often neglecting the real world. Parental supervision _____ tools, such as time limits, can be imposed to manage children's online usage."

(19)

However, not all parents view gaming negatively. Mdm Rawya, a mother and gamer herself, shared the potential _____ of gaming. "As a parent, I see how gaming can sharpen my children's social skills through multiplayer games. They also _____ how to problem solve and have improved focus."

(21)

Dr Mahmood, education and supervision counsellor at Sultan Qaboos University, added, "Children can learn both positive and negative behaviours from online activity. We just need to supervise them and the time spent online to ensure they do not fall into addiction."

SECTION D: Comprehension (15 marks)

Read the passage below and answer questions 22 to 29.

Sally sighed heavily. It had been a rough week. The heavy rains had washed off the seeds that she had painstakingly planted one by one, in a bid to play her part in environmental conservation against global warming.

I stared lovingly at the precious child, then at the storm outside. As the rain poured heavily, I snuggled Sally and her little brother, Asher, into their mother's old bed. Knowing it was going to be a frosty night, the thick blanket would keep their little bodies warm. Reluctant to have Sally go to bed feeling dejected, I thought of how to lift her spirits. Right then, I knew just the story to tell them.

5

"I want to tell you the story of Jadav Payeng. He was my biggest inspiration when I was your age, Sally. You see, we didn't have robot machines that planted trees at a massive rate then, like we do now. Trees had to be manually grown, and it wasn't easy, but this man didn't just plant trees; he grew an entire forest - The Molai Forest!"

10

"Wow! Grandma, how was that possible? Did he do it alone?" Asher asked, his eyes glistening in excitement.

"Yes! He did it all by himself. In 1979, the forestry division launched a scheme of tree plantation on 200 hectares of land. Jadav was among the labourers involved in this project. When the project was completed after five years, he was the only one who stayed behind to water the plants daily. While doing so, he planted even more trees, turning the area into a forest. Slowly, wild animals found their way to it, and it became a sanctuary to many species like the Bengal tigers, Indian rhinoceros, and many vultures too!" I continued my story.

I shared how Jadav Payeng became known as 'The Forest Man of India'. "For nearly forty years, rain or shine, he planted trees tirelessly. Some days, the strong winds would blow his seeds off the ground and on other days, heavy rains would wash them away. This prevented the trees from being successfully planted. However, neither landslides nor gales would deter him," I shared with pride. "No one knew of Jadav's efforts, which only came into notice when some forest department officials went into the forest in search of a hundred elephants that had retreated there."

25

Sally then recalled her teachers talking about Jadav Payeng in class. They told her that poachers came to hunt for rhinos in his forest. Jadav alerted the forest department, and the officials caught them.

30

"I'm glad his efforts were noticed, especially when he did not give up despite failing countless times," Asher added, glancing at Sally and giving her a mischievous smile.

Sally's face reddened. She now realised why I had told them this story. Her face lit up and she suddenly exclaimed, "I'll try planting more trees tomorrow. I want to be the Forest Girl of Singapore!"

35

Asher and I laughed. I smiled to myself, happy that she had understood what I was driving at.

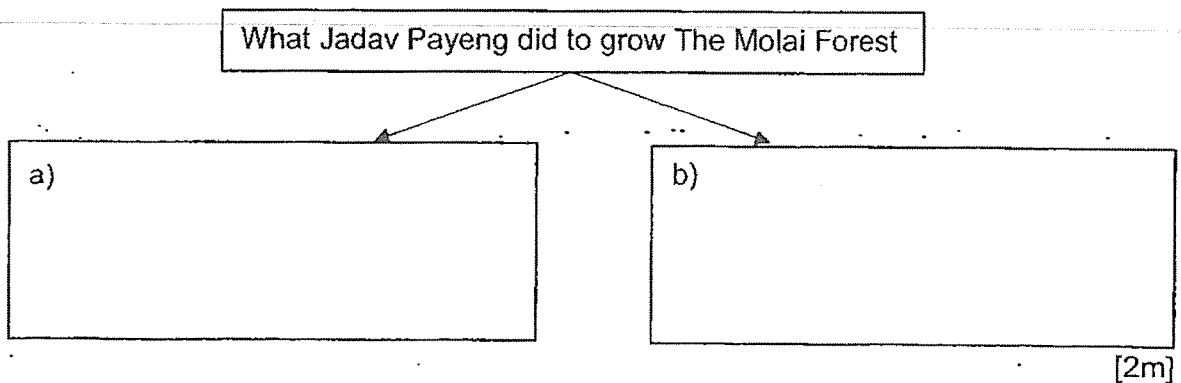

22 What was Sally's relationship with the writer? [1m]

23 Fill in the following table. [2m]

What the writer did	Reason for her action
